TO THE EDITOR

Seeing Things as They Are

Richard Starnes, as he bounces merrily from topless bathing suits to the CIA's Congo operations, neither illuminates nor enlightens.

Mr. Starnes would have us shroud in deceptive secrecy the basic God-given beauty of a woman's form.

But Mr. Starnes would delight in exposing and/or suppressing such a vital instrument of national security and free-world integrity as the Central Intelligence Agency.

Clearly, Mr. Starnes does not want to see things as they really are.
